No turns starts July 13 at Stony Plain Road and Anthony Henday Drive in Edmonton

Edmonton... Motorists are advised that there will be access closures to and from Stony Plain Road and Anthony Henday Drive starting July 13 to accommodate construction of the Stony Plain Road interchange.

At that time, traffic will only be able to travel north and south on Anthony Henday Drive, and east and west on Stony Plain Road. All turns at the intersection will be closed.

Access will be reopened in stages throughout the summer and full access to Stony Plain Road at Anthony Henday Drive will be restored by mid-October, weather permitting. Further advisories will be issued as progress is made and routes are reopened.

Motorists are advised to use 170 Street, 178 Street, and Highway 60 as alternate routes. Yellowhead Trail and Whitemud Drive can also be used as alternate routes to access Stony Plain Road and 100 Avenue via the cross-streets of 170 Street, 178 Street, and Highway 60.

Alberta Transportation is working closely with the City of Edmonton to minimize traffic disruptions to motorists for interchange construction on Anthony Henday Drive at Stony Plain Road, Lessard Road, Callingwood Road and Cameron Heights Drive.

Motorists should also use caution in these areas and obey all signs and message boards. Motorists are reminded that fines for speeding are doubled through construction zones when workers are present.
